- Bee-autiful Bee-havior Bingo, Is an incentive program to get students to model good behavior without constantly having to give a prize or something away.
- It's delayed gratification that helps teach patience and builds excitement.
- Plus It's a fun and easy way to reward students throughout the day on a daily basis.
- The Bee-havior Bingo Board is perfect if you catch a child bee-ing good, completing a project 1st, staying on task, when you know that's difficult for them, helping another student out etc. all those little things that really don't deserve a big reward, but behavior that truly needs to be noticed and reinforced.
- A student is acknowledged and gets to go up and jot their name anywhere on the board.
- At the end of the month the teacher draws as many letters and numbers as they deem appropriate.
- The teacher calls out a letter and number, which match up to a student's name.
- Teachers/students decide what the rewards will be.
- You can give certificates, classroom "bucks" that students can save and "buy" things from the classroom rewards store; students can get a trip to the treasure box, or get to choose a non prize type thing, like getting to be line leader, getting to be student helper, or get to eat lunch with the teacher etc. I have a list of over 100 such activities if you like that sort of idea.

- Obviously the more times you are caught bee-ing wonderful, and get to write your name on the Bingo Board, the more likely you are to get a "bingo" and receive a prize.
- I have a bingo board for each month.
- You can mount these on an appropriate monthly color of construction paper, laminate them and have students use dry erase markers, so you can reuse them or simply run them off each year.
- For sure laminate the BINGO letter and number cards.
- I've also included mini- Buzzin' By Happy Grams to send home with students who win the monthly Bingo Games.
- I hope you enjoy this behavior modification technique. I think your students will. It's easy to implement, simple to keep track of and fun for your kiddo's.
