Question of the Day Directions:

Since there is a lot of mustache mania going on, I thought I'd make a Question Of The Day poster for you.

Print it off and then laminate it.

Adhere it to a cookie sheet or other metal backing.

Print off a copy of your students' school pictures, carefully draw a black mustache on each one and then laminate.

Attach a magnetic disc to the back of each photo.

Write your question of the day with a dry erase marker, in the space provided.

During circle or morning work activities, read the question to your students.

They answer the question by placing their photo on either the "yes" or "no" side of the poster.

Make tally marks as students add their photo.

Have children count how many there are for each section and write the total number on the bottom.

Ask students which answer is greater or less than.

Question of the Day is a fun way to get to know your students, as well as, introduce graphing, tally marks, and data collection.
