Find A Friend
Detective Agency

- ★ Teacher runs off "rap sheets."
- ★ You can have older students fill them out in class, or send home with younger students to have parents help them fill them out.
- ★ Remind students NOT to put their name on their paper.
- ★ Pass out a rap sheet to each student. Make sure that no one has their own.
- ★ Wave a magnifying glass and make all of your students detectives.
- ★ Their job is to find their new friend.
- ★ Explain to your students, that by interviewing their classmates, asking them questions, they will eliminate suspects, until they find their new friend.
- ★ When everyone has found their friend, detectives will introduce them to the class, using their rap sheet to tell about them.

Helpful tips:

- Choose one question from your list.
- Ask this SAME question for each suspect.
- If you get a no response, move on to another suspect.
- If you get a matching response, then ask them another question.
- If their next response does not match, then move on.
- If it does, ask another question. This may be the friend you're looking for.

Name badges help your students get to know each other. They help little ones with name identification as well. Print, write names, laminate and cut out. Have students wear them whenever they are doing detective activities. They can be a pin or necklace.

Run off on black construction paper.
Cut out centers. Laminate so that you have "glass" in the center.
Put students photograph on the back.
Use as a border for your bulletin board.
