

"Peekin' Scarecrow" Writing Prompt Craftivity

My scarecrow sees ...

Diane

My scarecrow sees pesky, black crows flying in a blue sky.

My scarecrow sees straight rows of sandy colored corn.

My scarecrow sees fat, orange pumpkins growing nearby.

My scarecrow sees a tired farmer riding on an old, green tractor.

My scarecrow sees autumn leaves fluttering in the wind.

At night the scarecrows come to life ...

Diane

At night, the scarecrows come to life! They help each other get their jobs done. They go through the cornfields to Old MacDonald's farm, for a secret farm dance.

They have a great time singing, sewing, singing and playing about. Some even take a bit of their stuffing!

No crows are invited, but the scarecrows try to hunt and flutter for a while.

A few scarecrows get scared, partner up with some shy goats to talk about their rather boring life, as they take a stroll in the moonlight.

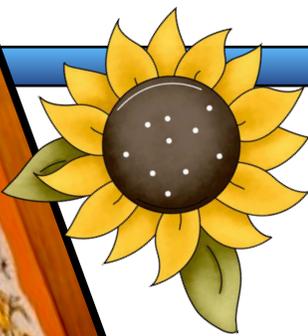

Before the rooster crows, a sleepy bunch of scarecrows summer back to their posts.

They are always exhausted from their midnight escapades and are happy to hang around and do nothing but stare, as they rest in the warm sun.

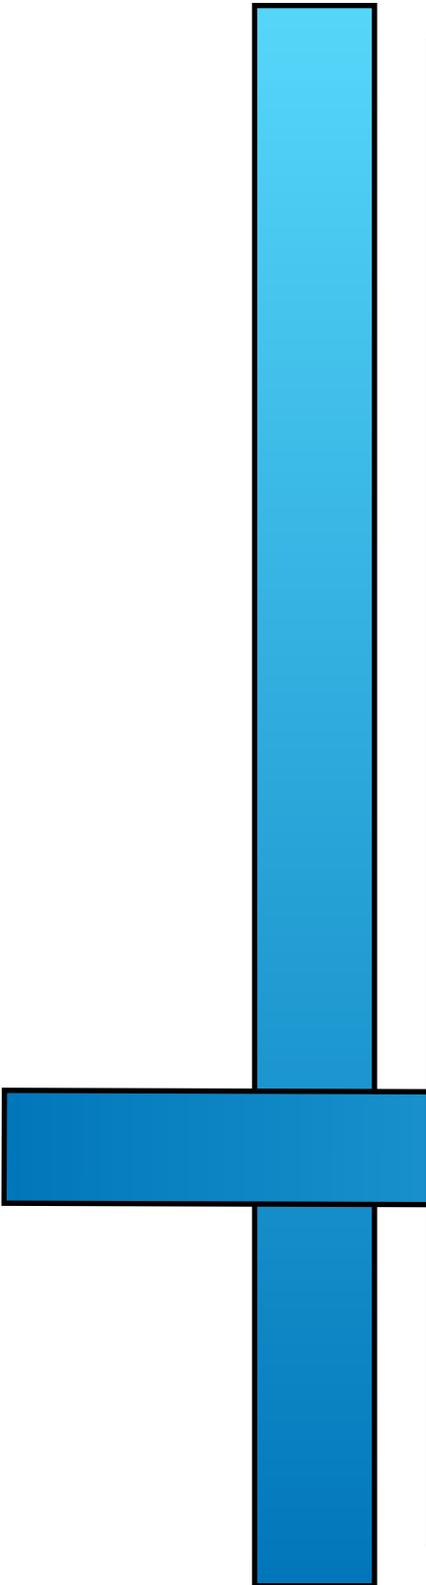

Scarecrows like to ...

Scarecrows like being lazy.
They like hanging around all day doing nothing.
They like being very quiet.
They like flapping in the wind.
They like watching nature.
They like helping farmers.

This scarecrow is stuffed with money ...

There are 42 writing prompts for students to pick from. Toss them in a basket & allow students to pick 3. They choose their favorite, then toss the other two back.

Tip:

Stack all 7 pages together; add a few staples to hold them in place then snip all 42 at once.

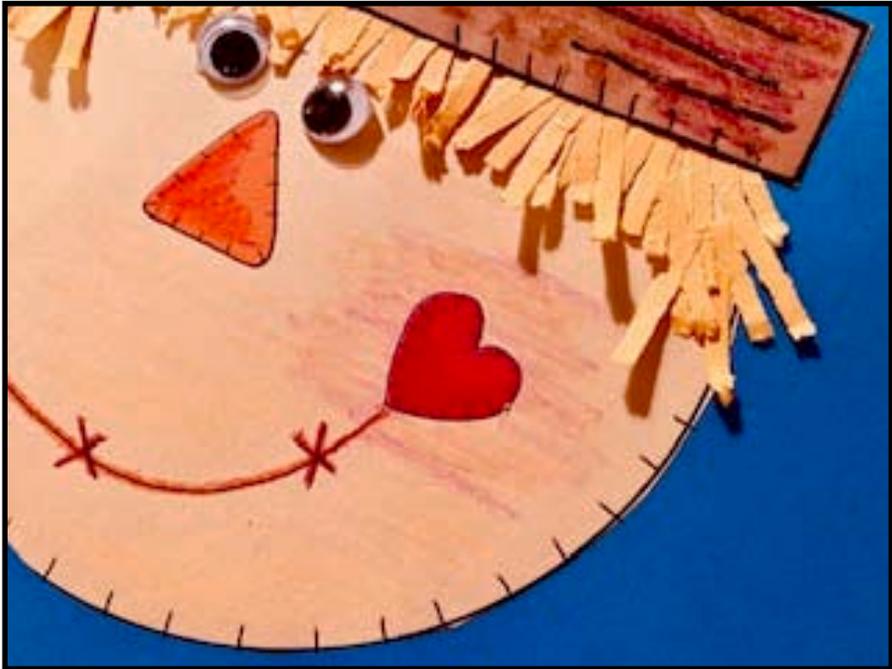

I spent quite a bit of time thinking up highly motivational prompts that I think your students will get excited about.

Students add a bit of color to the autumn patches then glue this prompt to their completed scarecrow.

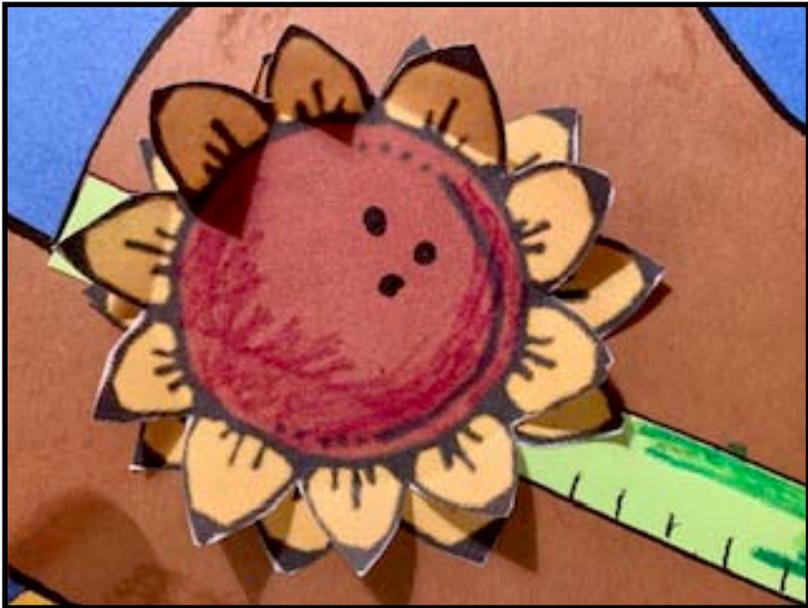

Shading, wiggle eyes, and a sunflower add some 3D pop.

Students can glue their writing prompt horizontally or vertically.

I've included 3 completed prompts, so that you can quickly & easily make an example to share.

Scarecrows like being lazy.
They like hanging around all day doing nothing.
They like being very quiet.
They like flapping in the wind.
They like watching nature.
They like helping the farmer.

Besides the 5 different writing prompt papers, I've also included 3 hat patterns to choose from.

Students can draw their own face, use the face that's provided, or cut & glue facial features from the various pattern pieces.

This is my example of drawing on a face.

I made the hair putting a sheet of yellow construction paper in a shredder.

Another sample.

At night, the scarecrows come to life! They help each other get down off their posts then tromp through the cornfields to Old MacDonald's farm, for a secret barn dance.

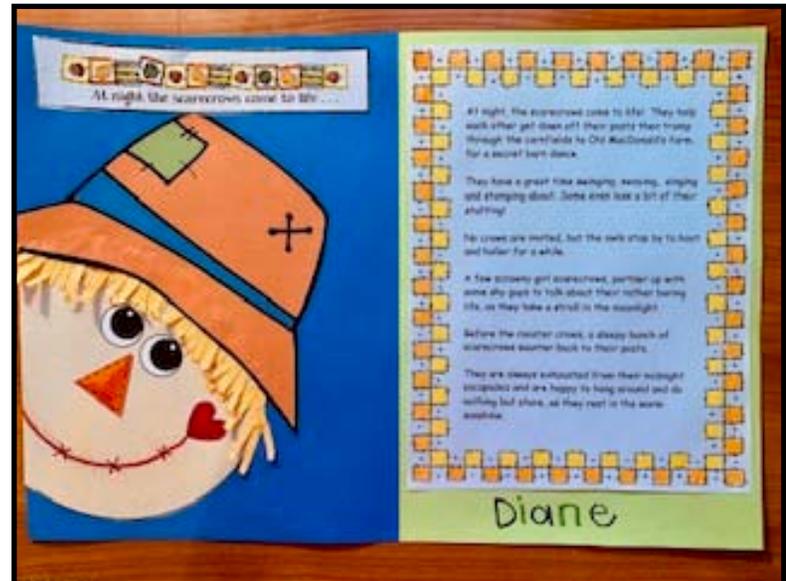

They have a great time swinging, swaying, singing and stomping about. Some even lose a bit of their stuffing!

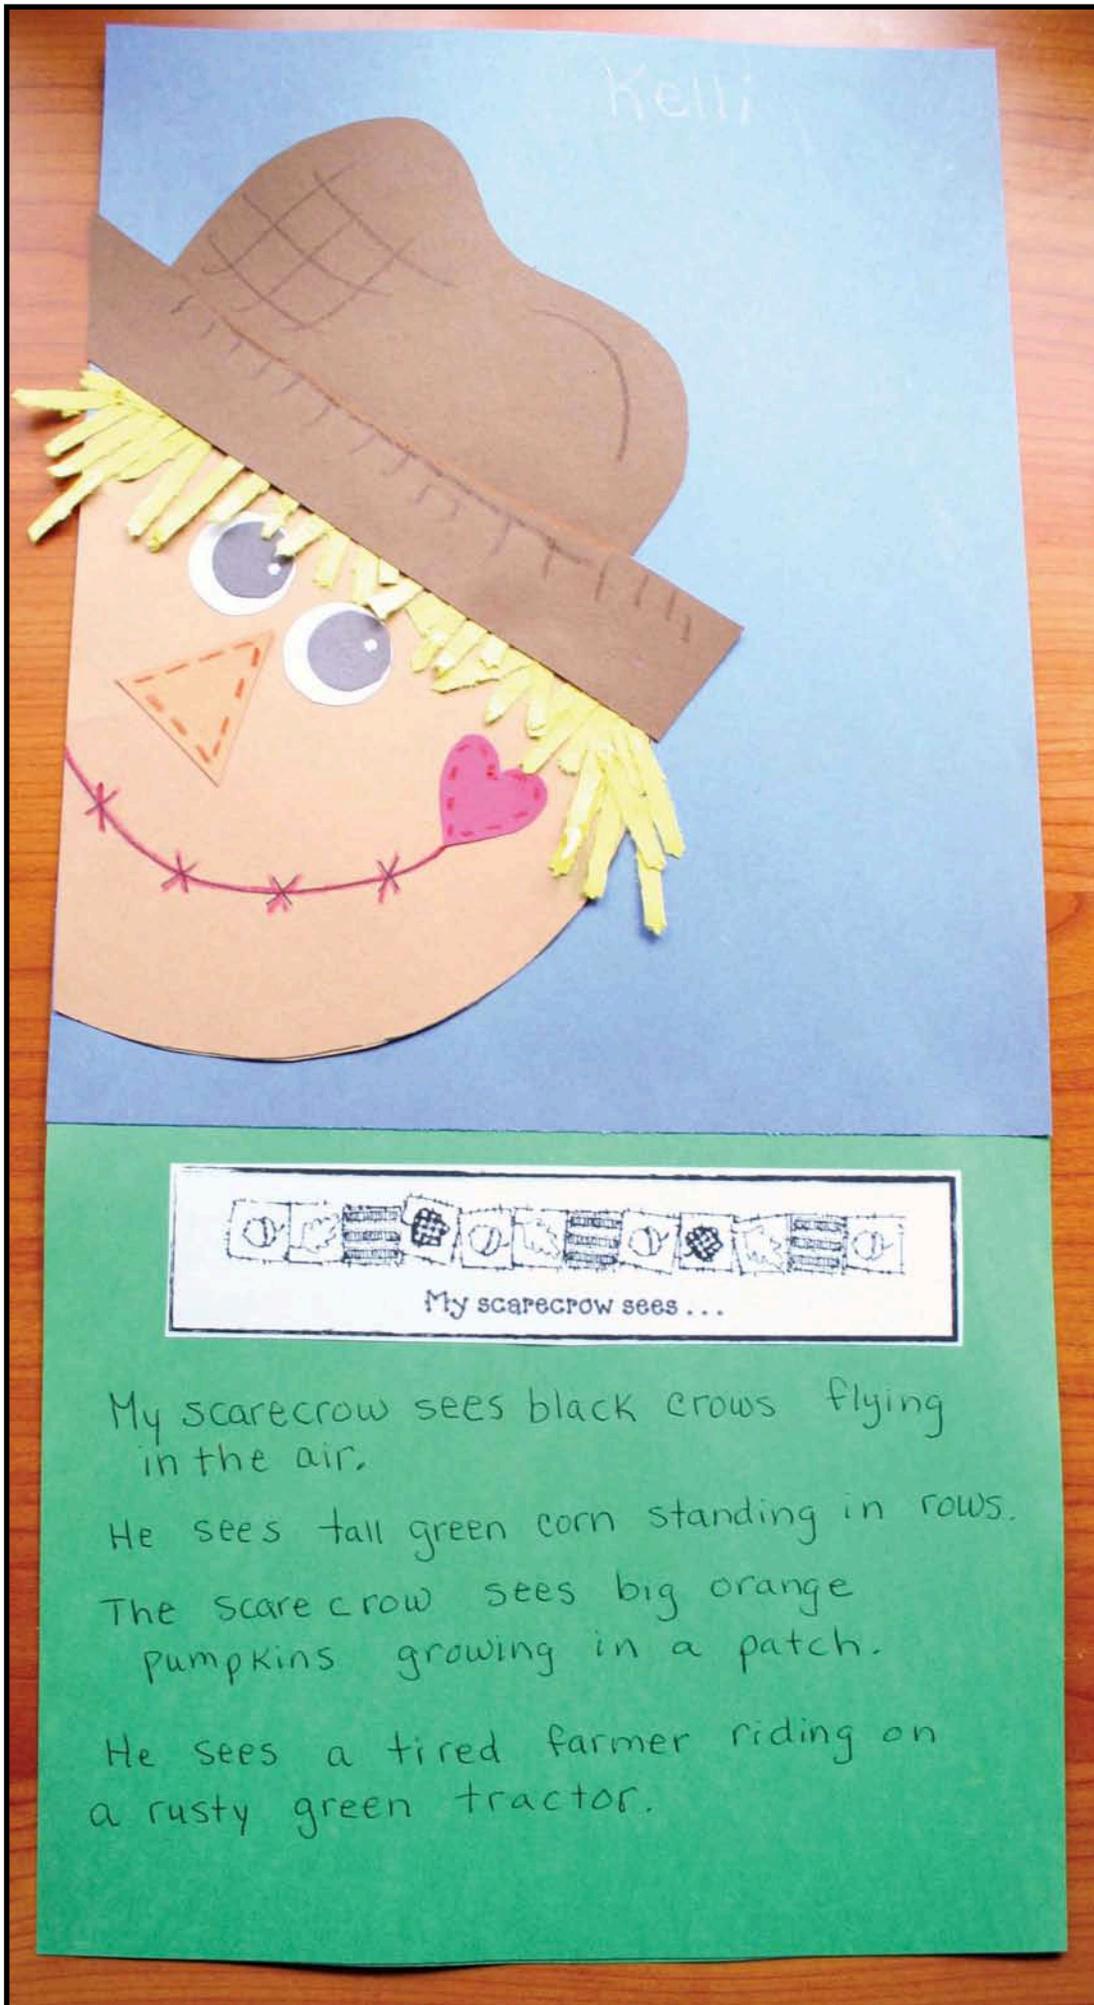

No crows are invited, but the owls stop by to hoot and holler for a while.

A few scrawny girl scarecrows, partner up with some shy guys to talk about their rather boring life, as they take a stroll in the moonlight.

Before the rooster crows, a sleepy bunch of scarecrows saunter back to their posts.

They are always exhausted from their midnight escapades and are happy to hang around and do nothing but stare, as they rest in the warm sunshine.

Kelli

My scarecrow sees black crows flying in the air.
He sees tall green corn standing in rows.
The scarecrow sees big orange pumpkins growing in a patch.
He sees a tired farmer riding on a rusty green tractor.

There are 5 writing prompt worksheets with borders for students to choose from.

Another option is to have students simply glue another sheet of construction paper to the bottom or the right side of their scarecrow, then write on that.

Prompts can be displayed vertically or horizontally.
